THE PRESIDENT'S INAUGURAL

We take great pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the admirable Inaugural Address of Hayes, to be found in another column. It is so all-inclusive that many of the impressions we had received from the declarations by his past utterances and record as his candidate are nearly bearing out throughout the entire address. He avowedly intends to be President of all the people of the United States, and to administer the government in accordance with the Constitution and the laws. He says that the South may have his sympathy and local support in all efforts to secure to the people the rights guaranteed by the Constitution and laws, and that he will do his duty in protecting the rights of the colored people, and that he will do his duty in protecting the rights of the people of the South against violence, and that he will do his duty in protecting the rights of the people of the South against violence, and that he will do his duty in protecting the rights of the people of the South against violence

The Report of the Examination by the Insurance Department.

ALBANY, February 1, 1877.

HON. WILLIAM SMITH, Acting Superintendent of New York Insurance Department.

In accordance with instructions received from you under appointment of Nov. 30, I report the completion of the examination of the affairs of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York.

Made at the time when the annual business of the Company commenced, the work was considerably facilitated by the Department representative being in the office during the whole time of the examination, and the facilities thus afforded for a thorough and correct exhibit of the Company's condition were duly appreciated by the Trustees and officers of the Company, who were always ready to render every assistance in their power.

The valuation of the Policies in force has been made in the Department under the supervision of Mr. D. H. Kiefer, our Actuary, and have accepted the calculations, as the result of the report of our actuary not engaged in New York.

The assets of the Company with their main components, are stated in round numbers at $92,016,726 46.

It is the opinion of the Company's officers, and I see no reason to dissent from it, that the outstanding premium notes, which are not included in the assets, are fully secured by the unearned premiums on the policies in force, which are not included in the liabilities, and are in the aggregate more than sufficient to cover the amount of these notes.

The Company does not accept other indorsements than the policies themselves, as collateral for premium notes, and the policies are not issued until the premium is actually paid in cash.

The liabilities are stated at the full amount required by the New York standard, and include a reserve of $1,000,000 as a contingent guarantee fund, over and above the reserves on all policies in force.

The surplus, as shown by the Company's statement, is $3,705,314 27.

The superintendent has given a careful examination of the United States and other bonds, mortgages and other stocks and bonds owned by the Company, the book and cash balances, and the results of the examination are in every respect satisfactory.

The policies issued by this Company are based upon the best tables of mortality, and the business is managed with a degree of economy which, when the extent and character of the business transacted are considered, is unusually low.

The Trustees and officers have given every facility to the examination, and have shown a disposition to render it as thorough and complete as possible.

The Company is in a sound condition, and its affairs are managed with ability and fidelity.

Acting Superintendent.

Whereupon your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him a license to sell and dispose of the real estate of said deceased, situated in said Hampden, and in said County, and the holders will be greatly benefited by a partial sale of any entire portion of said real estate of the deceased, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration and legacies.
